

Black Box Project

We dismantled a disposable camera to analyse the inside and get a better idea on how it works.

After removing its automatic way of capturing, we used the composition of it and created our own pinhole camera in the dark room. It was a fully manual process which created interesting abstract visuals.

The blurry light shapes captured in an unknown period of time represent movement, which is the starting point of our final project research.

